What's your last name?
What's your last name?
What's your last name?

Who do you know?
Who do you know?
Who do you know?

Right face.
Right place.

Right time.
Right name.

One call.
One door.

One chance.
Once more.

Who's your father?
Who's your mother?
Who's your uncle?
Who's your lover?
What's your last name?

Nepo baby.
Nepo baby.

Born inside the door.

Nepo baby.
Nepo baby.

Someone's waiting on the floor.

Talent?
Maybe.
Chance?
First.

Another name.
Another door.
Another meeting.
Another call.

What's your last name?
What's your last name?
What's your last name?

Tell me who you know.

What's your last name?
What's your last name?
What's your last name?

That's how it goes.

One audition.
Two hundred faces.
One has a famous name.
Guess who gets the places?

One works for years.
One waits outside.
One gets the callback.
One gets the ride.

“Keep trying.”
“Not today.”
“Maybe next time.”

Next time?
When?

Nepo baby.

Nepo baby.

Born inside the door.

Nepo baby.
Nepo baby.

Never had to knock before.

Talent?
Maybe.
Work?
Sure.

But some are born
with the key.

Some are born
with the key.

New aristocracy.
No crowns.
No castles.
Just contacts.
Just names.
Just tables.
Just numbers.
Just one little phone call.

Ring.
Ring.
Ring.

Name.
Name.
Name.
Name.

What's your last name?
What's your last name?

Forget the talent.

What's your last name?
What's your last name?

Forget the years.

What's your last name?
What's your last name?

Forget the tears.

What's your last name?

Talent needs a chance.
Talent needs a door.
Talent needs one opening.
Not four generations more.

Talent needs a chance.
Talent needs a door.
Talent needs somebody saying:
“Come in.”

What's your last name?
What's your last name?
What's your last name?

Who opened the door?

What's your last name?
What's your last name?

Who opened the door?

Talent?
Maybe.
Opportunity?
Family.

What's your last name?
What's your last name?
What's your last name?
